Flash-Card News Helps Those Struggling During Pandemic

100% Commission For Subscription Sales

May 12, 2020 / - Flash-Card News has launched a new feature designed to help virtually anyone struggling to help pay bills during the Covid-19 crisis. They've set up a system to generate any number of subscription codes to Flash-Card News that can be easily sold by anyone needing to raise funds. There will be no questions asked of anyone that wants subscriptions for resale during the pandemic. A simple email request will be answered with up to 100 subscription codes, along with some simple instructions to follow. Those selling the subscriptions can keep 100% of the total sale value.

Flash-Card News delivers small news bytes in an online Flash-Card Format that makes it easy for users to assimilate and understand a wide variety of news items. Priced at $9.95 per month USD, the discount codes will offer a substantial discount as compared to the posted sticker price. It's hoped that this initiative will help many people earn a bit of badly needed money during the pandemic. It will also help Flash-Card News, a struggling startup that's also been affected by the pandemic. While FCN won't earn any revenue from the sales made, it will benefit from the word of mouth generated.

Along with the News Flash-Cards, there is an extremely sophisticated search feature that helps you find news items of interest. Users can also browse through the News Flash-Cards for a quick snapshot of the world today.

It's important to note that Flash-Card News isn't looking replace newspapers, TV or radio news. It deals only in small, discrete facts. If anything, it encourages users to seek out other news sources to get the full story. But, it helps make the task of understanding & remembering news information much easier.
